

Department of Counseling Position Announcement

We seek a colleague with the demonstrated ability to produce empirically driven and practically relevant research in Rehabilitation Counseling and Rehabilitation Counselor Education. The position requires an earned doctorate in Counselor Education and Supervision, preferably from a CACREP-accredited program, with a minimum of four years post-degree experience Teaching in a CACREP-accredited counseling program prior to July 1, 2013, LPC in North Carolina (or license eligible), CRC certification (or CRC eligible), and NCC certification (or NCC eligible) is required.

This 9-month tenure track position serves the Department of Counseling (COUN) at North Carolina Agricultural and Technical State University. The successful candidate provides instruction to graduate candidates in the department with an emphasis on doctoral courses in the Rehabilitation Counseling and Rehabilitation Counseling doctoral program (CACREPAccredited). The candidate will also advise students, chair dissertation research, and supervises clinical experiences. The successful candidate is expected to engage in scholarly activities grounded in a clearly articulated research agenda. These activities include publishing manuscripts in top-tier peer-reviewed journals, procuring extramural grant funds, and disseminating research findings at well-respected international and national conferences and meetings in the discipline area.

The objective of the Department of Counseling is to prepare professional counselors and counselor educators. All counseling programs within the department are CACREP accredited. Departmental studies are grounded in philosophical, theoretical, methodological, and practical foundations that describe counseling theory and best practices in clinical work, education, advocacy, and leadership. In addition, the department emphasizes the importance of multiculturalism, assessment, and social justice. Using the most current teaching technologies and adult learning theories, course content is delivered in a variety of in-person, hybrid, and online modalities. The Department of Counseling prepares students to be critical thinkers in a global society. Student leadership skills are cultivated through a combination of mentoring, student organizations, service learning experiences, and community partnerships.

Departmental graduates pursue professional careers within a variety of human service settings, including, but not limited to, schools, higher education, public and private counseling centers, rehabilitation agencies, community development organizations, non-profit agencies, private corporations, clinical mental health agencies, and university extension programs.